Most people have flown a kite or have seen one rise and dip(下降) in a strong spring wind. However, not so many people know that kites were first made in China thousands of years ago. The ancient Chinese made and flew kites even before they wrote.

The ancient Chinese used sticks, strings and paper to make kites. Some of the kites looked like birds or insects. Others looked like fishes or flowers.

In ancient times, the Chinese made use of kites in wars. They would fly those war kites in the dark. The kites made strange sounds. Those who were at war with them would hear the sounds and run away. They thought those strange sounds were made by gods in the sky.

The ancient Chinese also flew kites to bring good luck and a rich harvest(丰收). Sometimes they tied long strings and hooks(钩) to their kites. Then they would fly the kites over water, letting the hooks hang down to catch fish.
