One possible version:

A question I asked

When I began to learn English, remembering words was a big headache to me. Even though I could remember some, they went out of my mind soon. I was so hopeless.

One day I asked my teacher a question before I would give up. "Why do I have to remember words?" The teacher said, "Words are not for remembering but for talking and writing. Keep using them and you will remember them."

I took her advice and tried to use words in my talking and writing. To my surprise, learning words by heart didn't seem to be a problem anymore.
